Pattern Of Infiltration

CPYRGHT

The "Other Dulles" Allen W. director of the Central Intelligence Agency and brother of the Secretary of State—did some plain speaking about plans of the Communists to infiltrate the free world, in a speech delivered at the law school of University of Pennsylvania recently.

Warning that we should recognize the danger, he said Americans seem reluctant to heed official statements by political leaders in other countries. Yet, he said, Hitler's "Mein Kampf" written in 1924, was the blueprint of his future policy. Then Dulles warned:

"Much the same can be said about the writings of Lenin and Stalin. We were too inclined to laugh off their theories of world revolution and of the inevitability of conflict between communism and the free world."

He said Communists seek to take over "our parliamentary governments, and to use the freedom which our system of government gives to destroy all vestiges of that system.

"Of course, I do not wish to leave with you the impression that even for the immediate future the Soviet proposes to limit their subversive techniques to the single policy of infiltrating Western parliamentary systems and then taking over and destroying these systems.

"The weapons of subversion and of contrived civil war will still be used wherever they think they can get away with them. And there will be no abandonment of the use of strikes and such forceful tactics, especially through labor unions."

Kremlin leaders, numerous times, have indicated what their actual plans are for the future. Their methods may change to fit the times but they show no signs of abandoning their purposes.

It is up to the leaders of the free world working together as allies and friends to help uncover and to frustrate the Red design, Mr. Dulles said in sounding his warning.

The CIA chief made interesting observations on Moscow's recent anti-Stalin campaign. He attributed them to two things:

"First, I think they (Soviet leaders) felt Stalin was taking risks which would involve the Soviet Union in war. Today they are not ready for war.

"Second, there are pressures within the Soviet Union that got so strong that I think they felt they had to do something to persuade the people that the old terrorist campaign of the past, the old NVD terrorism, was going to be done away with. I don't say that it is going to be done away with. I think a lot of the men who are carrying it out worked cheek and jowl with the terrorists for 20 to 30 years."
